

ANNOUNCING A PREHISTORIC JOURNEY

NEW SHORES

Out of the mist of prehistory emerges Li. He is a superior man, a success at everything he tries, destined to lead his tribe to greatness. Unfortunately, Li is the only one who knows this.

Li is with his tribe when their coastal village is struck by disaster, and as they search for a new home. He loses them when they encounter a new threat, and he is driven to find them again to seize this opportunity to improve his standing and take a step towards greatness. He is joined by many others on his journey, including his estranged daughter Su. Together they meet many people in different lands as Li uncovers more about his people, his clan and himself.

Ciaran J. McLarnon's New Shores takes us to this mysterious era, joining Li as he finds threats and treasures, exploring superstition and wonder in his prehistoric realm. His life and his world are there to behold as Li dives into what it is to be human.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Ciaran J. McLarnon is a Northern Irish writer who lives in the town of Ballymena, north of Belfast and close to dramatic scenery that has inspired many filmmakers and other artists, including renowned poet Seamus Heaney.

Ciaran has a BSc in Marine Biology and an MSc in Ecology, both of which strongly influence his writing. His work explores subjects including history, the natural environment, horror and crime. Although this is his first novel, his words have been featured in many publications, and he was long-listed for the Adelaide Literary award. Find more about Ciaran J.
